The digestive system includes the alimentary canal which the food passes and the gland and the glands that open into it. The digestive system consists of mouth, buccal cavity, pharynx, oesophagus, stomach, intestine. 1) Alimentary canal:- Alimentary canal begins starts at mouth and terminates in cloaca. It is longer than the body length. 2) Mouth:- It is wide crescentic situated on ventral side of body. It is divided into lower and upper jaws. 3) Buccal Cavity:- Mouth opens into a wide buccal cavity bordered by jaws. Teeth are attached to the cartilaginous jaws but are simply embedded into skin. The teeth are arranged in several rows. 4) Pharynx:- Buccal cavity narrows down posteriorly into a short but wide tube called oesophagus. It is thick muscular wall its mucous lining is thrown into longitudinal folds. 5) Stomach:- The oesophagus passes backwards into the abdominal cavity to open into a large muscular and U shaped stomach. - the stomach is divided into two types pyloric stomach, cardiac stomach. its proximal limb is longer, wider and distensible is called cardiac stomach. - the mucous lining of cardiac stomach also forms longitudinal folds like those of oesophagus. - At the junction of cardiac and pyloric stomach a small blind growth is present called blind sac as well as sphincter valve. - the lining of pyloric stomach is mostly, through slightly folded distally. - at the end of pyloric stomach is present a strong circular muscle band called pyloric valve, guarding its opening into a small but thick walled muscular chamber called bursa entiana. 6) large intestine:- Bursa entiana is followed by intestine. it is a straight wide tube about the diameter of cardiac stomach in the middle of its length. Its narrow anterior parts receives the bile and pancreatic ducts. - In scoliodon the inner mucous lining of intestine becomes folded anticlockwise into a longitudinal spiral or scroll valve or spiral valve of about two and half turns. This is called scroll valve or spiral valve. - In transverse section it's hooks like a watch spring it serves to delay the passage of food and offers increased surface for absorption. - The last part of intestine is called rectum it is short and narrow tube opening behind through anus into the ventral cloaca.
